PRESS STATEMENT

Architectural research initiative arch out loud has released the winners of its' RESIDE Mumbai Mixed Housing international open ideas competition.

arch out loud challenged competition entrants to design a mixed residence development on one of the last undeveloped sections of Mumbai's coastline. Entrants designed for both the indigenous fishing community that has occupied the site for hundreds of years - as well as a new demographic drawn to the affluent neighborhood that now encompasses the site. Proposals identified architectural and planning solutions that supports integration between these socio-economically distinct communities.

Rapid urban growth and growing inequality has created a global crisis in housing that increasingly segregates the rich from the poor. Though not fully understood, there is a clear and parallel relationship between the size of a city and its level of socio-economic disparity: the larger the city, the less equal it tends to be. Physical and social segregation, which both reflects and perpetuates socio-economic disparity within a city, is a growing concern in cities worldwide - including Mumbai. The long-term success of a city depends on the collective well-being of all its inhabitants. The proposals for the RESIDE competition examined the idea of architecture supporting social inclusion and breaking down spatial segregation within the megacity.
